

Emma Foulkes-Taylor

I have lived full time in the Murchison Shire since 1989. My husband and I have three adult children and we run a meat sheep pastoral operation alongside a contracting business specialising in concrete, water exploration and civil works.

I've been a hard working and independent voice on the Murchison Council since 2015. I am currently a council representative on the Mid West Development Commission, and I represent our shire on the Murchison GeoRegion Working Group.

I'm an active volunteer in the Murchison and further afield, holding positions on a number of groups/committees.

I have a particular interest in community development, education and health. I am currently on Council's Community Development Working Group and have been active in establishing the Community Development Masterplan.
